Junior Varsity Hockey

Old heroes meet young hopefuls

by Ary Aronoff

A major contribution to Concordia's success in university hockey in recent years has been the establishment of a junior varsity program.

"We are now in our third year of existence," said Mike Murray, coach of the junior varsity squad. "There used to be a junior varsity league five years ago, among all the universities, but it disbanded. Concordia has always had a very good reputation for its hockey program and this is a factor in it."

The team plays in a league called the "Montreal Senior Hockey League", against very formidable opposition. The other three teams in the league are the Sir George Grads, Loyola Grads, and Station 10, the bar, not the police station.

"Paul (Arseneault), feels that by playing against the experienced players they will be better prepared when they are brought up to the varsity team," commented Murray.

The opposition that Murray refers to comes from the likes of Mark Shewchuck, Dan Fournier, Rick Moore, Mike Timperio and McCann, ex of Loyola, John Boyce, Frank Donnelly, Howard Saibil, and not to be forgotten, Scotty Bateman of Sir George.

What the junior Stingers lack in experience, they definitely have the edge on their foes in conditioning.

"In the early part of the season, I hope to win a few games because of our conditioning. When we show up to a game with three complete lines while the opposition has only two, we should be able to tire them out by using short shifts. This has been fairly successful, especially when the opposition only has three defencemen," Murray said.

Two exhibition contests in Cornwall yesterday saw the United States juniors skate past West Germany 5-2, while Concordia University Stingers, bolstered by four McGill Redmen, tied Sweden 5-5.

NO LACK OF EXPERIENCE

Although the other teams appear to have a monopoly on experience, the J.V.s have not been shut out. "We now have three players that Paul will probably call up this season. François Bouchard has five goals in only three games with us and has been a major factor for our victories. Albert Difasio played pro with Beauce Jaros in the North America League and will be eligible in January."

"Brendon Lowe is sitting out this year from varsity hockey since he played last year in the International Hockey League. Arseneault rates him very highly," continued Murray. "In nets, we have Doug McCormick who played on Dawson's CEGEP winning team. Dave Boyd played varsity last year and has some experience. It's good to have experienced people to help guide some of the younger guys."

PAUL'S FARM TEAM

"No other university has a junior varsity team," Murray continued, "It usually helps, Concordia has a step on everyone." Arseneault uses the team as a farm system and whenever he and Bob Philip are in town, they come down to watch the games, and scrutinize the team's performance.

Without a J.V. squad, a team would have to have a few players sitting out games. This can lead to some problems. A lot of times a J.V. player comes up and boosts the varsity team's third line. Besides being in good condition, the players have learned the Stingers' system.

"I teach these guys Paul's style. We have a lot of players who have played Junior B hockey, where it is wide open. Paul emphasizes discipline on the ice, where they should be on the ice at all times. I try to teach them not to wander.

Stingers roll over Red Devils

FREDERICTON (CP) — The rebuilt Concordia Stingers, who dressed 17 freshmen in their 21-man lineup, thumped University of New Brunswick Red Devils 14-0 in exhibition college hockey action here.

Top gun for the Stingers, opening an Atlantic tour with the win against the hapless Red Devils who are trying to recover from a 1-19 season last year, was Dwane Byers who hit for three goals before being thrown out of the game in the second period on a match penalty.

Kim Elliott, playing on the same line with Byers, scored one goal and set up five others as he completely stymied the UNB defence.

Other Concordia scoring came from Dan Vinet and Andrew Bourgeois who scored twice each.

David Boyd, Alex Westgate, Yvon Disotel, Albert DiFazio, Mark Fiorentino and Carl Tommero scored singles.

Nick Sanza was in the nets for the shutout.

Concordia led 3-0 after the first period and 9-0 after 40 minutes.

Ken MacLean was the starting netminder for UNB but was lifted after the second period for Jim Thompson.

The Stingers are in Halifax to play Dalhousie Tigers today.

Tomorrow and the day after will be in Antigonish.

Hockey Bills lose in overtime

By DAVE GAUMER

A third period reawakening went for naught as the St. Louis U. Billikens dropped a 4-3 overtime decision to the Concordia Stingers of Montreal before 4,457 home opener hockey fans at the Checkerdome Wednesday night.

Concordia's Dwayne Byers got the winning goal off a two-on-none break at 3:47 of the sudden death overtime.

"It was typical of our play that it ended that way," sighed Billiken coach Bill Selman. "Our two defensemen collided at center ice and their two guys got in alone. Brian (Billiken goalie Brian O'Connell) didn't have much of a chance."

THE BILLS, WHO had rallied on third period goals by Steve Major and Chuck Durocher to send the game into overtime, had a number of dances to win it in the 10-minute sudden death session.

But suddenly the puck came out to center ice and Billiken defenders Kent Jackson and George Kryzer, who had scored the first Billiken goal, collided.

That allowed the Stingers' Bill Doherty to grab the puck on a play that may have been offside and carried it in on left wing with Byers on his right flank. Doherty forced O'Connell to commit himself, then passed over to Byers, who put it away.

THE STINGERS' FIRST goal, by Doherty at 18:07 of the first period, came off another Billiken faux pas. Veteran defenders Brian Roll and Doug Butler both started off a loose puck laying just inside the blue line in the Stinger zone. But both decided at the same instant the other was going to handle the puck and each backed off.

That allowed Doherty to streak past, pick up the puck and go in alone against O'Connell and connect on a rising shot from close range.

"We had problems tonight where we just felt we would not have them all season," said Selman. "Our defensemen are all veterans and they are going to have a fine season I know. But this just wasn't a good night for any of them."

Kryzer tied the score a little more than a minute later with a shot from the right point that bounded in off Concordia goalie Nick Sanza's glove.

"Their goalie did a fine job and I felt Brian made some good saves for us," observed Selman. "We hate to lose, but I thought it was an excellent college hockey game and that we gave the fans some fine entertainment."

But the Bills admittedly were not skating as well as they might in the first two periods, often coming out second best in the race to loose pucks.

BYERS MADE IT 2-1 at 5:49 of the second frame when his shot from right wing went in off O'Connell's pads and Yvon Disotel converted a two-on-one break at 13:43 of that frame when O'Connell came out in an effort to pick the puck off Disotel's stick and missed.

The Bills failed to convert several go power play opportunities, one of the coming midway through the second period when Disotel was sent off

CONCORDIA hockey Stingers ended their exhibition tour of the Maritimes on a winning note, but they failed to win the big one.

Stingers got a shorthanded goal late in the game to edge St. Francis Xavier X-men 4-3 yesterday in the consolation final of the annual St. Francis Xavier tournament at Antigonish, N.S.

In opening round play on Saturday, Stingers bowed 3-1 to St. Mary's Huskies. St. Mary's went on to win the tournament final in convincing fashion, crushing University of Moncton Blue Eagles 8-1.

The Stingers managed only 19 shots on goal to 35 for St. F-X but took advantage of their scoring opportunities.

The winning goal came at 16:44 of the third period when Mark Fiorentino, killing a penalty, stole the puck and raced in to score. Dwayne Byers, Rick Marsh and Alex Westgate scored the other Concordia goals. Barry Wolbaum, Greg Keating and Mario Claude scored for the X-men.

The Stingers had defeated the University of New Brunswick and tied Dalhousie earlier on the tour. Their record this season is three wins, two losses and a tie.

Stingers maintain grip upon annual Invitational

"He's cool, there's no other word for it."

That's how Concordia Stingers hockey coach Paul Arsenault described his prize goaltender Nick Sanza following his club's 5-3 victory over the Alberta Golden Bears Saturday night.

The win meant Concordia continues to monopolize its own Invitational tournament ever since it began three years ago.

Sanza played brilliantly in the championship game, stopping the highly-touted and No. 2 nationally-ranked Golden Bears time after time with his lightning-like reflexes and at the same time

Stingers 4, Blues 2

TORONTO — (CP) — Steve Gibson and Al Vaughan scored in the third period to give Concordia University Stingers a 4-2 win over University of Toronto Blues in an exhibition hockey game last night.

Toronto had taken a 2-0 lead on goals by Dan Tsubouchi and Doug Caines before all-star centre Kim Elliott got one back for Concordia in the first period. Francois Bouchard tied it 2-2 on a breakaway in the second period.

Concordia outshot the

the tournament's all-star team.

"I try to keep my cool out there," said Sanza, peeling off his equipment. "Coolness is important because so often a goalie is face to face with potential panic situations. Coolness is something that's acquired from playing in pressure situations. It comes from experience."

And experience is one thing Sanza has had in abundance. He played professionally for Charlotte of the Southern Hockey League and before that led the Sherbrooke Canadiens to the 1984-85 Stanley Cup.

dent national team which recently completed a tour of Europe.

Sanza noted he has a problem maintaining his cool in light of the recent controversy concerning him and the CIAU for allegedly violating the rule which forces a former professional player to regain college eligibility by sitting out a year as a full-time student.

"I'm very disappointed in the way the league, the CIAU and a lot of other people have condemned Concordia and myself. We haven't even broken down the defence."

competitions, with one goal each. Alberta got goals from Ted Olson, John Devaney and Mike Broadfoot. Concordia outshot Alberta 30-27.

Other stars
Defenceman Boyd was selected as the tournament's most valuable player and along with Stinger centre Kim Elliott were named to the all-star team as were Don Spring and Kevin Primeau of Alberta and Mike Devaney of St. Mary's.

Meanwhile, basketball coach Bruce Cockburn noted that the Stingers' performance was a testament to the team's hard work and dedication.

Concordia's success in the tournament is a testament to the team's hard work and dedication.

Stingers retain title by downing Golden Bears

The Concordia Stingers, playing a disciplined style, upset University of Alberta Golden Bears, the number two-ranked team in Canadian College hockey, 5-3 last night in the championship game of the Concordia Invitational hockey classic.

Second period goals by Yvon Disotell, Dwayne Byers and Randy Borbely erased a 1-0 Alberta lead and the Stingers got the third period goals from Bill Doherty and Dave Boyd to build up a 5-1 lead with just over ten minutes to play.

The Stingers, who have never lost in the championship of their home tournament, fell behind 1-0 when Alberta's Ted Olson tipped home Kevin Bolton's shot from the point past Concordia goaltender Nick Sanza.

Disotell, who joined Concordia this season from St. Mary's Huskies, tied the score early in the second period when he tipped home Kim Elliott's pass from in front of the net.

Byers, one of Concordia's captains, scored on a breakaway with 5:11 gone in the period to put the Stingers ahead to stay and Borbely converted a pass-out from behind the net at 12:29 to put the Stingers in front by two.

The game was rough in spots, and referee Pierre Lajeunesse called seven minors to each team in the first two periods as well as a pair of fighting majors.

In addition, Concordia's Mike Slack was ejected from the contest for being the aggressor in his fight with Alberta's Kevin Primeau.

In the consolation game, St. Mary's bombed Brandon 8-0.

Unranked in the nation's poll of college hockey teams means nothing these days if you happen to play for Concordia University Stingers.

Playing the part of the underdog is fun. You lose and you don't surprise anyone. You win and everyone is bewildered.

That sums up the third annual Concordia University invitational hockey tournament.

No. 2-ranked University of Alberta Golden Bears naturally were favored to walk off with all the marbles. If they didn't, then St. Mary's University Huskies were.

Bears not so golden

Even the other club in the four-team, two-day tournament, Brandon University Bobcats, probably rated a better chance for top honors than Paul Arsenault's Stingers.

But for the third consecutive year, the Stingers shut out the visiting teams from the winner's circle. The Stingers, with a tough second period, stopped the Golden Bears from Alberta, 5-3 in the championship affair Saturday night.

"I figured the third period would open up if they got a goal," Arsenault explained. Concordia led 3-1 going into the third but managed to break the game wide open with a goal by Bill Doherty at 9:21 and then a fifth marker by Dave Boyd just 32 seconds later.

Stingers 4, Gaiters 1

By RANDY PHILLIPS
of The Gazette

Concordia Stingers men's hockey coach Paul Arsenault had an "embarrassing" moment prior to his club's 4-1 victory over the Bishop's University Gaiters at the Concordia Athletic Complex last night.

Arsenault was being honored for recording his 300th college career victory which actually came Jan. 6 when the Stingers upset the highly-ranked St. Mary's Huskies 6-3 in the opening round of Concordia's third annual invitewas really embarrassing.

Arsenault, whose hockey philosophy is that it's not how many games you win but rather how you win them, began coaching in 1963 when he was appointed varsity coach at the now defunct Sir George Williams University. In 13-and-a-half seasons he has amassed a 303-132-33 record with 10 league championships. He has twice been named the Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Union's coach of the year ('72 and '76) and the conference's outstanding coach three times.

One of his few regrets is the fact he didn't win the national title when his club of two years ago, and which he refers to as his "best ever", lost to Toronto 3-2 in overtime. He has yet to win a Canadian championship.

The Stingers gave Arsenault his 303rd victory last night but it took persistent effort for Concordia's marksmen to finally beat a hot Bishop's goalie, Don Demers. Stinger centre Kim Elliott led the scoring with two goals, including a short-handed one. Steve Gibson and Daniel Vinet added solos while John Mills notched Bishop's lone tally late in the third period. Demers had 45 shots fired at him while Bishop's managed only 15 on Stinger goalie Gino Yanire.

In QUAA basketball action, the Concordia men's and women's team put to-

This season presents one of the great challenges of Arsenault's career. Concordia was hit hard by graduation and the re-built Stingers are no longer the lords and masters of the Quebec Universities Athletic Association.

Arsenault honored for 300th victory in college hockey

By MIKE BOONE

Bob Philip may not be the best man to ask for an assessment of Paul Arsenault.

Philip is the assistant hockey coach at Concordia University. Arsenault is the head coach. As a rule, assistants cannot be relied on for clear-headed, objective analyses of head honchos.

Philip's case is special, however, because he played for Arsenault when the latter was coaching Sir George Williams and coached Sir George when Arsenault went over to Loyola. As a former player and opponent — as well as a present colleague — Philip knew whereof he spoke when he discussed Arsenault's career prior to a ceremony at Concordia last night honoring Arsenault for 300 career coaching victories.

The milestone win came Jan. 6 when Concordia downed St. Mary's 6-3 en route to the championship of the Concordia Invitational tournament. Since then the Stingers have added four wins, the latest a 4-1 conquest of Bishop's last night.

"Paul has changed a lot," said Philip. "Technically, as a hockey coach, he knows a lot more than when he was winning championships at Sir George."

A native of Prince Edward Island, Arsenault graduated with a physical education degree from the University of New Brunswick and took over the coaching reins at Sir George in 1963. When he arrived at the downtown campus, college hockey was small potatoes, but Arsenault's serious approach brought about immediate changes.

"Discipline has always been big with him," says Philip. "Not following guys around and watching what they do but discipline on the ice."

"When Arsenault first came in, hockey wasn't taken that seriously at Sir George. He laid down certain rules: brought in a system. Some the guys quit, but Arsenault was left with the kind of team he wanted and Sir George was the first really disciplined team in the old Ottawa Lawrence league. He had good line and a good goaltender, but his third-line couldn't skate. Loyola always had better talent, but I used to win."

Arsenault's won-lost record was 139-68-17 in 16 years at Sir George. He moved over to Loyola in 1972, compiled a 77-37-4 mark in three seasons, winning Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Union Coach-of-the-Year honors in '72. When Sir George and Loyola merged to form Concordia in 1975, Arsenault was named head coach. Philip became his assistant. They've guided the Stingers to an 88-27-9 record. Arsenault was Coach of the Year again in 1976.

Concordia's Arsenault nears 300-win plateau

Paul Arsenault of Concordia University is just a stone's throw away from a hockey coaching milestone and with assistant Bob Philip, he's relying heavily on a group of West Island skaters this season to get it.

When the varsity Stingers hit the 1977-'78 campaign trail Nov. 11 at home against Trois Rivières, Arsenault will need just eight victories to qualify for membership in the exclusive 300-win club. It's expected by all in the Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Union (CIAU) that he'll reach that magic mark early in the season, in all likelihood before Christmas.

A resident of Pointe Claire, Arsenault has compiled an impressive record in his 12 years of coaching at Concordia, Loyola and Sir George Williams.

Last season, he was named the Quebec University Athletic Association's coach-of-the-year and is a two-time recipient of the CIAU's award honoring excellence in coaching.

In addition, Arsenault has been selected to coach the Canadian Student National squad, with Tom Watt of the University of Toronto and Clark Drake of the University of Alberta.

Bob Philip, this season handling the reins of assistant coach at Concordia, has also enjoyed a considerable amount of success in college hockey.

PAUL ARSENAULT

Arsenault has won 10 league titles but the national championship is a goal that has eluded him, despite a couple of near misses.

Paul Arsenault claims to be "the eternal optimist." Not only that but his Concordia University Stingers didn't let him down in the clutch.

In what was billed as a rebuilding year, the Stingers moved to the head of the class last night by winning their second consecutive Quebec Universities Athletic Association hockey championship. "I always thought we could win it," Arsenault said after his Stingers belted the University of Quebec-Trois-Rivieres 7-4 to take the best-of-five series.

This year's Quebec University Athletic Association men's hockey league title will be decided in the last game of season.

That comes Wednesday night when the Concordia University Stingers travel to Trois-Rivieres to play les Patriotes in the season's empty.

It also marked the second time in four games this season that the Redmen topped coach Norm Meunier's talented Patriotes along with one tie.

"I guess it's a psychological thing between us and Trois-Rivieres just as it is between Concordia and us," explains Madill. "While Trois-Rivieres is leary and even afraid of us, we have the mental block making it hard for the Stingers regul-the toughest league victory that we ever had... and that goes back 15 years. There were two fine teams out there tonight."

Yvon Disotell, Alex Westgate and Dwane Byers scored in rapid succession in that first period which comforted the standing room only crowd of 2,000 at the Loyola Sports Complex.

Disotell's marker was a quick bang-bang play with Randy Borbely getting dropping it back to his team-mate. Finally, Yves Pellerin beat Stingers' goalie Nick Sanza when the Trois-Rivieres forward went in alone off the wing. Sanza had no chance of stopping the 3-1 going.

This time Borbely, Steve Gibson, Daniel Vinet provided the punch that, but eliminated the Patriotes right there and then.

"I think a win would have been a little more difficult if we had lost last night," Arsenault said.

Were in last place at beginning

Stingers had rough road to title

By MIKE BOONE

Concordia hockey Stingers find themselves in their accustomed position, i.e. atop the Quebec Universities Athletic Association standings, but it hasn't been easy.

Concordia, which usually waltzes to the QUAA title, has travelled a road to the top dotted by potholes and pitfalls. Coach Paul Arsenault began the season with a rookie-studded lineup and the Stingers quickly found themselves dead last in the five-team QUAA after dropping their first two starts of the season, both against the University of Quebec-Trois-Rivieres Patriotes.

Concordia had just suffered through a disastrous football season — two wins in seven games — and the mood at the west-end athletic complex was bleak.

At the Christmas break, the Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Union announced it was investigating a possible eligibility violation involving Stingers goaltender Nick Sanza. The CIAU's eventual decision — a two-year probation currently being appealed — did little to raise spirits at Concordia.

As controversy engulfed the team off the ice, however, the Stingers' play began to improve. They closed the season with a furious rush, first leapfrogging the improved McGill Redmen into second place and then nailing down the top spot with a win over UQTR on the Patriotes' home ice.

"I think we were a good team right from the start," Arsenault said yesterday, reflecting on Concordia's season to date. "We had a few ups and downs. A key factor may have been our exhibition games in the United States. We took a lot of penalties against the American teams and had to play under adverse conditions."

"The adversity may have hurt us in the short term but it helped us in the long run. We have some players — I'm thinking of Dwayne Byers in particular — who are former pros and had to learn more self-control."

Team captain Byers, playing his first full QUAA season, had difficulty changing the playing style he had learned with Beauce Jaros of the defunct North American Hockey League. Byers spent the first part of the season playing the heavy in innumerable re-enactments of "Slapshot" and familiarizing himself with the amenities of penalty boxes around the league.

His change in attitude has paralleled the Stingers' revival. Heading into next week's playoffs, Byers, Daniel Vinet and Albert DiFazio, another former Beauce badman, form the QUAA's hottest forward line.

"Byers hasn't had a penalty in our last four games," says Arsenault, "and for him, that's a miracle. It's been very satisfying for me as a coach to see the change in Byers. He's learned to adapt to college hockey and has become a team leader on and off the ice."

One aspect of Concordia's probationary status is the Stingers' exclusion from the weekly CIAU rankings. UQTR had been ranked fourth but dropped to seventh after losing to Concordia last week. The loss to the Stingers Wednesday night will probably drop the Patriotes further down.

"We consider ourselves a ranked team," Arsenault said. "This season we've beaten four ranked teams — UQTR, Alberta, St. Mary's and St. Francis Xavier — and we've beaten McGill, which ought to be ranked. We played the University of Toronto (Number one in the country) and lost on a late power-play goal."

The Stingers tackle the UQTR at Toronto tonight in a turn-up for the playoffs. A Stinger win would significantly reduce the credibility of the CIAU rankings but Arsenault is more concerned about the best-of-three QUAA semifinals, which begin Tuesday with McGill hosting UQTR and Concordia visiting Bishop's Gaiters.

The Stingers will be seeking a third straight QUAA title to cap off what Arsenault considers his most challenging season.

"It's been the toughest since I've been at Concordia, no question about it. We've had 16 new players since last Christmas and that's been a challenge."

"People talk about all the ex-pros we get," Arsenault added, "but ex-pros often present greater problems. It seems to take them much longer to adjust to the college game."
